Herman Smith.

snore

Twice of the stately Southerner that bore the stripes & stars.
With a whistling wind from the N. N. W.
swept through her pitch pine spars.
She had our starboard tacks aboard as we hung upon the gale.
Twice a cloudy night as we raised the light
on the head of old King's Sail.

It was a dark & a cloudy night the wind
blew steady & strong.
As gaily on the bounding deck our good Ship sped along.
When just before her rustling prow the
fury foam she spread.
And sending low her bosom in snow she buried her lee Cat-head.

What is that that rises upon our prow &
settles upon our lee.
Tis time for us to haul our wind abreast
of the Gal-tees.
For by her lofty spread of sail & by her length of spars
She knew our morning visiter was a British Man of War.

The night robe that this Frigate wore were her three Topsails broad.
Her Spanker & her huge boom jib.

+ Courses they were stowed.
She came rolling down before the gale
with the white foam at her prow.
Out Booms on board the Southerner, spare
not your canvass now.

There was no talk of shortening Sail.
By him who trod the Poop.
And by the weight of her ponderous
Gib her Boom bent like a hoop.
Her groaning chesstrees told the strain
that held our stout Main Tack.
But he only laughed as he glanced abaft in her bright & sparkling track.

12 h A.M. The Pilot came aboard at dinner time & reported two Boats off the N. head of Fayal. trying to land but could not. The Comm. Council wanted the Brig
to go out & try to bring them in our decks were full of Casks & the ground tier not quite stowed. The Mate said he could not go.
The old man went aboard B.R. Luray & tried to get Hale to go but he would not.
so Hamblin decided to try. We bundled those casks down off deck & slipped the Cables which took about two hours. The wind by this time had increased to a gale with rain. I hauled home the Lower Tapsail & set the gib. The shore was crowded with people looking at us. The I watch being ashore we had several men from shore. Before we arrived where the Boats were reported to be the Gib blew out of her & then the Foresail got adrift went to haul it up & parted the rigging. before it could be secured tore a large hole in the clew & along the foot. Layed aloft & furled it. Arrived where the Boats were reported to be but saw none. they having left some three hours before. Clewed ~~down~~^{up} the Lower Topsail & furled it. Set the F. T. Stay sail & Main Stag sail & try sail hove her too & layed there till morning.

Monday Oct 24 Wind light this morning. commenced to make sail at what we had & bent another Gib. there being no Upper Topsail when we started we having sent it down the day we Anchored Bent an Upper Topsail & sent down the Foresail. along towards 10 o'clock A. M. the wind commenced to freshen. it being head wind to town. Commenced beating up making short tacks the tide being against us we made but little. about 11 o'clock the tide changed & then we made better time. at about three o'clock we were making our last tack when the Fly Gib sheet parted also the Upper Topsail Chackle she would not go round so had to wear her the tide setting strong to leeward we lost a great deal. finding that we could not get in with what sail we had took a new Upper Topsail & bent it for a

Forget me not, what varied feeling,
These little magic words impart.
Absence and love at once revealing,
They sadden while they sooth the heart.

Friday. October 27th At about 11 o'clock on Oct 26 it commenced to blow. Kept her Head per compass under Foresail Upper & Lower Topsail & Trysail at three o'clock A.M. it was blowing moderate gale. Hauled on the wind & handed the Upper Topsail & Foresail. Kept her off again heading per compass N. by N. untill commencing to take heavy seas aboard. Hauled down the head of Trysail & kept her off a couple more points heading N. N. by N. per compass untill about 8 o'clock A.M. was obliged to haul our wind & hand the Lower Topsail. wind by this time had increased to a gale the Brig lying on the Port tack. at nine o'clock the wind suddenly changed from S.E. to N. N. looking to windward saw a Tornado coming started to wear ship got her off before the wind & tried to keep her so, but she broached too in spite of us & was thrown nearly on her beam end by the wind. Got up the axes & got ready to cut if required. the Brig laboring heavily & taking large quantities water aboard. instead of righting she settled lower as she took in water to leeward. the wind blew with such force as to raise the J. D. Boat clear from the cranes, parted the after fall & drew the hoisting strap forward & threw her across the quarter striking the L. Boat & taking that with her. shortly after the Haist Boat followed. The fore Board got cock-built by parting the lift. the sail was furled but the wind stripped it clean, also the Upper & Lower Topsails. the storm now raging with unabated fury. kept the pumps going constantly & throwing steady stream water. the storm now increasing was obliged in order to save Ship & lives to cut away the foremast. this happened at ten o'clock after the mast went over the side had much difficulty in clearing it from the Ship the rigging being all wire. by this time the storm was at its height & raging with great fury. the wind cut like a knife & was almost impossible to stand on deck. kept the pumps constantly going when about twelve o'clock she heeled, & the wind now moderated a little went below & changed clothes it being very cold & every-body drenched to the skin. Pumped her at four o'clock & found her making great deal more water she being strained by the storm. When the mast went it carried away the main Topmast at the cap where it hung by the rigging. also carried away the jib Booms at the cap which went clear of the Vessel. The storm at three o'clock had abated, but still blowing gale with high seas running.

Sat Oct 28th Commenced to clear away the wreck layed aloft & cut away the main Topmast. then let stays from head of mainmast to Bowsheet, & Bit forward & Bent fore & aft sail to them, & headed her for Fayal.
